He is always airing his accomplishments, hoping to "mash" some silly girl. When one of these interesting subjects appears the masher writhes and twists like a subtle anaconda, whom he resembles, indeed, and is at once afflicted with colic, wreathes his bland features, and he makes mysterious passes over his chin and moustache, his impudent lips, and finally with an indescribable twist of his ringed fingers, he puts the hand-kerchief away in his breast pocket; he has been indulging in a species of hand-kerchief literature—a sign language which variously interpreted means, "I would like to be acquainted," "we will meet again," "I admire you," "follow me," and similar trash. To a sensible, level-headed girl his maneuvers are so abourd that she can hardly repress a laugh, but should the masher discerners over the ghost of a smile, he would follow her to her own doorsill. So intense is his egotism that it never occurs to him that he is being laughed at. A lady in the state of the st

The lady was disconcerted for a moment by his boldness, then she said:
"I can not imagine what I have done that you should dare to address me in this manner!"

"Why, you have given me every sign," answered the wretch, pointing to the handkerchief she carried openly in her hand; "and I supposed you wanted to know me!"
To this day the lady does not know the sign language referred to, but she never carries her handkerchief on the street.

Another and bolder method employed is the conversation card. It is eminently innocent and proper in its language, and was originated as a source of amusement at evening parties. It is printed on colored card-board, generally in fine lettering, and the text is usually some simple request or question, as follows: "I have often seen and admired you. Would it be agreeable to meet, if so, when and where? The blank spaces on the card may be filled in with the an-awer. The whole business is clandes tine, and the single card in the possession of the writer of this article was found in the pages of a book from the public library, where it had been placed and inadvertently forgotten.

When one of these interesting subjects appears the masher writhes and twists like a subtle anaconda, whom he resembles, indeed, and is at once afflicted with a facial difficulty; his features work convulsively, one eye is partially closed; a smile intended to be an inspiration of love, but which in its idiotic vacancy more nearly resembles a suggestion of colic, wreathes his bland features, and he makes mysterious passes over his chin and moustache, his impudent lips, and finally with an indescribable twist political ethics. Nations do not now fight for fun or to show how brave they are. They fight to have their way about something. So far, too, from regretting that an enemy is weak when they attack him, they openly rejoice in it. In fact, they try to weaken him, or wait till they think he in weak before they attack him. Just weaken nim, or want in they taink he is weak, before they attack him Just as it is a fatal fault in a modern General not to be strongest at the point of collision with the enemy, it is a fatal fault in a modern statesman to go to war un-less he has allies, or has some advantage low her to her own doorsill. So intense is his egottam that it never occurs to him that he is being laughed at. Preparing Land for a Garden. A large proportion of farmers declare A large proportion of farmers declare that vegetable gardens are unprofitable, that they require a large amount of work, and make a poor return for it. The truth is many excellent farmers are very poor gardeners. They are experts in taising corn, potatoes and small grains, but they do not understand how to produce the ordinary garden vegetables. They think the land for a garden requires no special preparation, and no They think the land for a garden requires no special preparation, and no special manuring. It does require both. The spot selected for a garden should be well drained, and it is well to have it slope toward the south or southeast. The soil should be free from weeds, and the seeds that will produce them. Land that has long been in cultivated crops is not in a condition for a garden unless it is very highly manured. Even then it is likely to be objectionable as it is likely to be weedy. In many respects it is by to be weedy. In many respects it is better to break a piece of soil for a garden the summer before it is planted. He is now in Decatur and will appear at the opera house to-night as Damon in the drama of "Damon and Pythias," which will be given by request. A Distressing Mishap. Last evening while standing upon a Wabash car at the Union depot, in the Mrs. H. W. Hill. performance of his duties as a switchman, Ralph Leroy met with an accident which cost him his right hand. The car was a portion of passenger train No. 5, and it was being pulled backwards to be transferred to another track. Leroy leaned ontward, looking in an opposite direction from which the train was going, and as he turned about his head struck a telegraph pole standing dangerously near the main track. The switchman was knocked down off the car step, and a wheel ran over his right hand crushing the fingers. It was supposed by the lookers-on that the young man would be killed outright, but he was rescued with a mangled hand and many severe bruises about the head. Leroy was brought up town and taken to Dr. Walston, who amputated the hand near the wrist, leaving only the thumb and little finger. Leroy has a wife and one child. That telegraph pole has long since been feared by railroad men and it should be removed. Rally Once Again!

The ceremony was performed in the presence of about 75 invited friends of the contracting parties, and after the congratulations, a splendid collation was discussed. The following are among the presents bestowed upon the bride:

Table cloth and towel from bride's mother; table linen, Mr. and Mrs. Nye; Warrensburg, yesterday, which may necessitate the amputation of one of his mother; table linen, Mr. and Mrs. Nye; parlor lamp, quilt, knives and forks, pockstimbs. He and a number of other men were engaged in lifting a heavy piece of bridge timber, when the beam slipped and fell upon Mr. Tacker's left leg, crushing the ankle and breaking the limb just below the knee joint. He was attended by Drs. Catto and Cass Chenoweth. Mr. Tucker is a well-known farmar, and has many acquaintances in Decatur.

Rev. L. Field at Clinton The annual reunion of the 107th Illinois Volunteer Infantry, of which regiment Thomas Snell was colonel, was held at Clinton on Wednesday. There were 100 survivors of the regiment in line and many other old vets. The welcome address was made by Hon. W. F. Calhoun, to which Rev. John Wolf responded. The next speaker was Rev. L. Field, of Decatur, who was the color-bearer of the 107th. He spoke to his comrades in old style soldier talk, which was pleasing to the veterans and to the large crowd which was present. He alfuded to army life at Camp Oakland as a place long to be remembered by the 107th, and as the place where their colonel, Tom Snell, issued his famous order for his soldiers no to eat no pies, how the Col. became alarmed about the Dutch woman peddler whom he thought was a spy, and how she hid her pies and bologua behind a big log, where the Col. lay in wait for them, how it was not long ere his men discovered their colonel's tricks and outdid him by taking care of the stock themselves. His remarks on this subject were greeted with great applause by the soldiers who remembered the circumstances. He also alluded to many incidents of the war and of the exploits of the regiment; of their famous drink called "sing tring," etc., etc., which caused much merriment among the boys.

Among the innovations of modern fashion, one of the oldest is the wearing of velvet throughout the summer. There is this season an infinite variety of velvets—plain, openwork, plaided, striped, beaded, moired, flowered, and a number of novel devices in dark Oriental colorings. The plain black Lyons velvet is, however, the most favored. The new English brand of velveteen, known as the "Louis" silk-face pile, is finding a very large sale in America, as it is much used for underskirts and for chil-

-Dr. McClellan, the famous rifle-shot, gave an old colored man the other day a dollar to hold a target in the shape of the ashes at the end of a freshly-lighted cigar. The darkey took the dollar in his hand and the cigar in his mouth. McClellan walked back, raised the rifle and shot the ashes from the end. The exploit was repeated successfully, but the old man objected to the third attempt, saying: "De third time am eder lucky or it am onlucky."—N. Y. Trib-

Repairs and Improvements.

To keep a farm in repair requires the careful attention of the owner from the day it is put into use. Trees, etc., the day it is put into use. Frees, etc., that are set for ornament or shade improve from the hour they begin to grow; but pretty much everything else upon the farm begins to show decay from the day when it is exposed to the sun and rain. The best of paint parts with number of its leater in a month ha with much of its luster in a month, begins to fade in three, is quite dull in six months, and requires renewing in a year. New pine-board fences look fresh, and enliven the farm scenery for a time, but all farm fixtures are so exposed to the elements that indications of decay set in at the start, and this stands the farmer in hand to build with a view to the natural tendency in buildings and fixtures to vary from the perpendicular and to get rusty. Gateposts that are not at first set strictly upright, unless changed, ever afterward remain so. Inexpensive buildings receive more or less injury from the foundation at any point becoming de fective; hence it is better to guard against a corner going down before the structure is placed many it. The structure is placed upon it. The sagging gates or the untidy bars affect the appearance of all in the immediate vicinity. The gate-post is never too deeply or too firmly planted; and for a heavy gate, hardly any depth or firmness of soil about the hinge-post will absolutely insure against sagging. But a heavy oak stick, or three-inch plank, placed just beneath the surface, with an end against each post, will, as a rule, hold the hinge-post perpendicular and the gate level.

The impressions upon the minds of railway travelers, as they pass through a farming district, vary as much as those of the lover of art as he passes from a piece by one of the first masters to the merest daub by the scene-painter. Farms at best, as they are usually traversed by railroad tracks—no regard being had to lines—are seen at a disadvantage. Yet, if fences are erect and straight, and afford a reasonably sure barrier against trespassing animals; the buildings kept in repair, and the imme-diate premises kept clear of rubbish; if the strength of the land is not unduly taken by slipshod tillage, the manure pile in the meantime being left to rot in the barn yard, impressions received from any view will be favorable.

But perhaps the neglect to drain wet places upon the farm is as common a fault as any other, and one that shows the want of neatness in fields, and ontails lessened profits with unvarying certainty. When the team can be driven, with a load, over ground hitherto too wet and soft to bear an empty waron, then it is evident that drainage has been made available. No land should be left about the corners or other parts of fields in such condition that water will stand long enough upon it to prevent a good crop of corn being grown thereon. As it has been proved possible to redeem impassable swamps, there can be no reasonable excuse for continuing to tolerate unsightly angular parcels of wet ground in inclosed fields, kept either for tillage or for grass.

It is said that a man may generally be known by the company he keeps, so the business character of the owner of the farm on the right of the road, or the farm on the right of the road, or that one on the left, may be pretty correctly estimated at a glance, even from the window of the car moving at high speed. The furrows being turned by the moving team, whether these are straight and deep or crooked and shallow, are facts that, disconnected from all others, have a pointed meaning. The man who reclaims wat lands more his man who reclaims wet lands upon his farm, stacks his straw in a clean, wellsheltered burn-yard, to be used as feed and bedding, and to become incorpor-ated with the winter's manure, keeps his fences erect and his gates from sag-ging, will give in these things evidences of thrift, and show premises strongly in contrast with the farm of the man over the way, who habitually neglects to attend to either of these very important details.—National Inve Stock Journal.

The Eastpo rt (Me.) Sentinel says There has lately occurred a decided change in the sardine business. The fish have suddenly and unaccountably dis-appeared from the coast, and in conquence thereof all the factories are standing idle, and the operatives are Lack of fish makes a vast difference in the business in the town. To most of the inhabitants it is their living, their Scarcity of fish also affects very sensibly the storekeepers, as when the factories are running trade is good, but when they are closed the stores present alm ist as deserted an appearance as the fatories. As this same condition of affairs prevails all along the coast, it is impossible to foretell when we shall see a revival in the sardine business." Millions Given Away.

STRONG FACTS!

A great many people are asking what particular troubles BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is good for.

It will cure Heart Disease, Paralysis, Dropsy, Kidney Disease, Consumption, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all similar diseases.

Its wonderful curative power is simply because it purifies and enriches the blood, thus beginning at the foundation, and by building up the system, drives out all disease.

A Lady Cured of Rheumatism.
